Alabama Humanities Foundation Annual Report

Welcome Letter

It is an honor for the board of directors and staff of the Alabama Humanities Foundation to present this 2010 annual report. Our mission is to create and foster opportunities through grants and AHF-conducted programs for scholars and the public to interact and explore human values and meanings through the humanities. Our dedication to this mission and the many successes we have enjoyed in providing Alabamians with opportunities to experience the humanities made 2010 an exemplary year.

Thanks to generous financial support from you—individuals, the business and corporate community, fellow foundations and nonprofit agencies—our programs, grants and scholarships were made possible. In-kind gifts are another important source of support to the Alabama Humanities Foundation. Whether with materials or services, these donations help AHF cut costs, in turn allowing us to further our mission across Alabama. And, while budgets are getting smaller and funding for 2011 will be trimmed, we appreciate the continued support of the National Endowment for the Humanities and the State of Alabama. We pledge to our financial supporters that we will be efficient stewards of these gifts.

The humanities are alive and well in Alabama as a result of the energetic and dedicated staff at the Alabama Humanities Foundation, along with hard-working scholars, board members and volunteers. One successful program for 2010 was SUPER Emerging Scholars, which increased from one to two institutes and is dedicated to providing high-school students with critical thinking and writing skills in the humanities. Also, our banner event for last year was TKAM 2010: To Kill a Mockingbird, Awakening America's Conscience. Through the TKAM panel discussion, art exhibits and auctions, and film showing, AHF reached a wider audience than ever before, celebrating Harper Lee's thought-provoking novel and raising funds for an endowment, which will live on as AHF continues its successful programs throughout the years to come.

Our 2010 awards luncheon continued the tradition of providing engaging speakers and noteworthy honorees. Edgar Welden, civic leader and funder of the Jenice Riley Memorial Scholarship for teachers, was the 2010 Humanities Award winner. Alabama native and chief legal correspondent for CBS News Jan Crawford was our speaker.

We continue to reach out to different constituents, including our attendance at several cultural festivals last year and our creation of a young professionals' board, planned to kick off in fall 2011.

The highlights of 2010's calendar, programs and grants initiatives show why the Alabama Humanities Foundation will continue to thrive and grow, even as we face uncertain funding. We look forward to working with the public and providing scholarship and educational opportunities in the years to come. And, for all those affected by April's storms that devastated vast areas of our state, our heartfelt prayers are with you now and always. 🍀
